

SLAUGHTER
"SEND HIM ON STAY" DRIVE

JUNE 24, 1908.

Average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

4,750

Put that Three Rivers, P. Q., couldn't have turned one of them onto its million-dollar life!

The candidates are now so quiet that it may be taken for granted that they are saving wool.

Yale '78 has double reason for celebration, for it's the thirtieth anniversary of graduation, and "Big Bill" Taft is a member.

The appreciative words which Governor Hughes speaks about Secretary Taft raise the former, as well as the latter, in the public estimation.

Ambassador Whitelaw Reid did not have his earlier hope that his daughter would marry some decent American realized; but in her marriage to a democratic Englishman, he has the first cousin to it.

The illness of Congressman James S. Sherman seems to have been somewhat magnified, as it was bound to be in the case of a man so suddenly lifted into the limelight by a vice-presidential nomination.

E. N. Foss of Jamaica Plain, Mass., has been beaten before, so his failure to be elected an alumni trustee of the university of Vermont will not trouble him greatly. Dr. F. T. Kidder of Woodstock, who was elected, takes all honors modestly, as he will this one.

The Northfield News is to be congratulated on its dual work of the past few months in the political line, upon it having fallen the task of being first backer of Frank Plimley for congressman and Zed S. Stanton for governor. It is one of the penalties of being in such a fertile political field as Northfield and Randolph are; yet the News has done some pretty effective work for both candidates.

Church mergers are getting their full exploitation in Randolph nowadays. Following the apparently successful union of the Congregational and the Christian churches, the Methodists and the Baptists are now considering the practicability of joining forces. We have not heard of any diminution of religious interest since the former merger and are still waiting to be told why the union was not a good thing.

GET OUTDOORS

The ministers set a good example when they went out into the fields on last "Blue Monday" for their monthly meeting, there to take in the beauties of nature and breathe in the invigorating air, while at the same time they conducted the usual business that comes before the Ministers' Monday club and listened to the discussions. It is a challenge to the rest of us to get out into the open as much as possible, if not in the conduct of our business, then in the hours and minutes that are set apart for recreation and leisure, or that ought to be so set apart.

If the majority of the workers of this city, which majority probably constitutes employees in the granite industry, should persistently follow the practice of devoting a certain proportion of the time every twenty-four hours in open air—winter and summer—The Times believes that the ravages of lung disease would be materially cut down in Barre. Walking to and from work is a splendid method of clearing the lungs of the dust of the granite plants, and that is practicable except in cases where the houses are far removed from the place of work. Walking, good vigorous walking, is a fine preventive of consumption.

But walking is an irksome task for many unless it is accompanied by the rest of some sport. For those we would advise active participation in the sports of the day, bicycling, running, foot ball, base ball, tennis, golfing, golfing and the numerous other games that draw people out into the open air. The sport which is perhaps the best adapted, next to swimming, to developing the lung capacity, clearing out the foul matter and affording amusement at the same time, is the game of golf, which is each year gaining more devotees among the workers in the granite plants of Barre. One might think that after swinging drivers for eight hours the granite cutters would not care to extend themselves to the extent of traveling twice around a mile and a quarter course and whacking a diminutive ball at intervals. Yet they do; and most any evening and Saturday afternoon a large number can be seen on the Barre Golf club links, enjoying themselves to the full, while at the same time they are adding to the years of their lives and to their general happiness. The game of golf may not appeal to all, but to those who have a fondness for athletic exercise, it will surely fall to prove interesting. But to all, the recommendation for open-air exercise of some sort is timely now that we have the best chance of the year to take it up.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Made Himself "Solid"

President-Elect John M. Thomas of Middlebury college has already made himself "solid" with not only the Rutland alumni of that institution but with all others who listened to his sound and inspiring address Thursday before the graduates of the Rutland high school. Middlebury college is about to enter upon a period of growth and increased usefulness under the direction of this progressive educator.—Rutland News.

Vermont Was There.

Vermont will learn with approval of the part her delegates took in the fight against the vicious plank in the national platform which sought to impugn the courts. A dispatch from Chicago says:—

The fight against the adoption of the plank was led by Thomas H. McCarter, attorney general of New Jersey, who got support from Drake of Colorado, O'Neil of Idaho and Fletcher of Vermont.

Another dispatch said:—

When the matter was taken up in full committee, Committeeman McCarter of New Jersey led the fight against it, supported by Fletcher of Vermont and others.

The Herald is glad to learn that its conception of the character of Allen M. Fletcher of Cavendish is well supported by his acts and courage.—Rutland Herald.

The June number of McClure's contains two charming color reproductions of Gilbert Stuart's portraits of Don Jose de Janduzes y Nebot and his seventeen-year-old American bride, Samuel Isham who vouches for the authenticity of these portraits recently placed in the Metropolitan Museum, writes:—

SHE DIDN'T WANT A DIVORCE.

She Only Wanted a Blank Application for a Divorce for Her Employer.

A young and pretty Barre girl, who is employed in an attorney's office and who had not worked there long enough to get the legal intricacies all straightened out, was sent by her employer to a neighboring lawyer's office for a blank libel for divorce. She went. Arriving at the neighboring attorney's office, she made known her mission, as follows:

"I want a libel for divorce," forgetting that it was a blank libel for divorce that her employer wanted.

The countenance of the neighboring lawyer brightened greatly, for he always has an eye out for business, and divorces are good business.

"Certainly, madam, just step in this way," and he ushered her into his private office.

With a flourish he offered his visitor a chair, saying:

"Take this seat, please." She did, although somewhat bewildered that a mere request for a libel for divorce should merit such attention.

Then the attorney seated himself on the other side of the table and settled himself into the position of expectancy and waited for the young woman to begin her tale of domestic infelicity that should cause her to want a divorce, so young and so attractive withal.

But she didn't. She was waiting for him to produce that libel. The silence between the two lengthened.

"What about it, anyway," finally inquired the lawyer, looking inquiringly at his fair visitor.

Then the suspicion broke over the young woman that she had made a mistake, and she cried out:

"Oh, I—I—I don't want a divorce; I'm not married. I want a blank libel for divorce for Mr. —"

The tension snapped immediately; the neighboring lawyer's face dropped perceptibly, and he slowly went about rummaging in his desk for a blank libel for divorce, and visions of fat fees floated down the alley-way. Blushing furiously, Miss New Stenographer flounced out of the office and down the street.

Rural Telephone Service.

Under a new plan for rural telephone service proposed by the Vermont Telephone and Telegraph company, owners of farms, country homes of city business people, clubs, camps, stores, etc., in places having a population of 25,000 or less, can have telephone connections with the general system of New England at very moderate cost. The principal features of this plan are the construction of local lines by subscribers themselves and connection with the nearest central office of the Vermont Telephone and Telegraph company, which makes a charge of 55 cents per month for residences and 70 cents per month for places of business, to cover the cost of operating. The subscribers get unlimited communications with all the subscribers of the exchange with which they are connected, and access to the toll lines covering all New England and the eastern part of the United States. This arrangement is of peculiar advantage to subscribers for this class of service. Half a dozen or more neighbors may club together, on their own plan, do their own work of construction, buying only wire, glass insulators and hardware, purchase their instruments outright or lease them from the company if preferred. This plan enables residents of localities too remote for remunerative development by the Vermont Telephone and Telegraph company to obtain telephone service as good as that of nearby towns and cities, and at moderate cost.

The cash drawer and a tin document case taken from the safe at the Willington post office at the time of the burglary about eighteen months ago, were found by Road Commissioner Gleason's men the other day under a stone pile which the men were moving. They were found about a mile east of the village, on the Jacksonville road, near the Averill tavern.
